

BIG

On the Internet, it seems that penis enlargement is on everyone's lips at the moment. It is everywhere we look online, and not a day goes by without another ground breaking technological advancement in this 'oh so important' region. Each day, as I open up my computer to begin my work, I am faced with an avalanche of emailed offers to dramatically increase the size of my organ - to improve its girth, length and overall level of hardness.

Apparently I can achieve this by means of a surgical procedure and in some cases simply by taking a variety of pharmaceutical supplements, all of which are easily obtained from these providores who promise bigness. I am constantly assured that a big penis is a passport to success, and indeed it is, I am extolled, a prerequisite to happiness. A big penis will open doors for me, it will shake the inertia from my being and springboard me into the big league.

Sometimes, I close my eyes and imagine a futuristic world where all men have these absolutely enormous appendages. As they move around tomorrow dragging these humungous penises in differing states of erection and flaccidity I see a new expanded world where the penis is no longer hidden behind clothing, but rather like an elephant at the zoo it lumbers around in all its wrinkled, shambolic glory.

Of course fashion would have to embrace the really big penis and furnish it with a cape or some other accentuating accessory - perhaps a cardinal skull cap to sit on its head, or a beanie proudly declaring club colours. Public etiquette would be very different now as well, with the first thing we encounter at male public meetings being that really big penis - it would be front and centre at every get together. Would we develop a new type of handshake for our big penises or an Eskimo rub of a different kind?

Public conveniences would have to change as well, with facilities needing to accommodate the really big penis. Sporting grounds of the future to fit all those big penises beneath the grand stand at the men's urinal. Cars would need to be redesigned with new seats and steering wheels to house the enormous frontal appendage; perhaps it would require its own airbag? Dancing would be very different too, with the "penis shimmy 'n' shake" getting a good work out, I imagine.

Of course most confronting would be the biological imperative for the ongoing evolutionary success of the species, meaning that our female partners would also have to upsize their own genitalia. For where would the really big penis be without a place to call home or at least a happy hug?

Yes, technology would have to meet a new challenge to match its unparalleled success in creating the gigantic penis; it would need to unveil the very large vagina. So close your eyes with me now, and imagine the lumbering slothful penises and their somewhat reticent masters moving somewhat slowly about town, and see them coming upon a fashionably dressed very large vagina and her mistress. By god it would be a very strange world indeed.

So, in retrospect, I am not too sure that the providers of these wondrous penis enhancing drugs have really thought this whole thing through.

www.womanzone.co.nz | phone orders: (Aus) 1800 005 969 (NZ) 0800 739 435

Orgasms are good for you - they promote hormone and endorphin production and reduce stress - enjoy them more often with WomanZone. Just like using a skin care product, the cumulative results are what count. Not a lubricant, WomanZone has helped thousands of women to a new level of intimate experience. WomanZone contains no dye, bleach or propylene glycol and is safe if ingested. WomanZone is a natural product formulated to enhance normal sexual function. Women can enjoy greater sensitivity, quicker arousal and a more intense experience. If your libido needs a lift or if you'd like to enrich an already active relationship, try WomanZone.

WOMANZONE Supporting your sexual wellbeing

Always read the label and use as directed.